

Freight options

When it comes to freight this will vary on location on how it is transported. Items under 90cm in length and under 20kg can go by Australia post. Items up to 190cm long and not over 25kg total (consider the packing) weight can go by Aramex but they don't go everywhere so forward address (can't do a quote with Aramex without the address) with post code for a freight quote. Larger and heavy items up to 3.9 metres can go via TNT/Fedex but be aware home deliveries can cost 250% more than a delivery to a business with a forklift. If you don't have a business address with a forklift you might have a friend that does and will receive that for you, failing that the best option is collect at their nearest depot.

It is not possible to have a shopping cart for cut timber and slabs and sell at reasonable pricing. There is no such thing as free postage or freight with that built into an inflated buy price on some web sites, we could do it but the cost would be outrageous trying to cover all possibilities but also there are many areas that are not serviced as well.

We have put the weight of the slabs on the item description so if it isn't too heavy and you want it cut in half or something that can dramatically change the postage/freight costs to be lower. As an example a 3 metre long 150mm x 25mm board would be about 4 times more expensive for freight/postage compared to it cut into 3 pieces 1 metre long.

If you wish please email us for freight/postage options on what you desire.
